Shelton View Forest

Shelton View Forest is a 42-acre forest in northwest Bothell, within a ten minute drive for over 45,000 residents. It is listed as priority habitat by the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife and is located within the Swamp Creek Watershed, making it an ideal candidate for preservation.

Explore Shelton View Forest

Over three miles of trails grace the ridges and ravines within Shelton View Forest. This tranquil space has long been a favorite of locals, including dog walkers, runners, mountain bikers, hikers, wildlife photographers, and students.

More than fifty species of birds live or visit here, including owls and woodpeckers. Rabbits, raccoons, tree frogs, and on rare occasion, deer and coyote have been seen. Plant life includes many native species, including ferns, salal, and Oregon grape, beneath a canopy of cedar and Douglas fir.

Just a ten minute drive from downtown Bothell, and one mile west of Canyon Park, this site is conveniently close to all residents of Bothell, and is a draw for outdoor enthusiasts from throughout the region. Visit today and join us in protecting it for current and future generations.
